supported by the strength of this universally acknowledged talented company.

THE SENSATION
produced at Paris by the representation of this piece was so great that the Emperor and Empress attended the theater on several occasions during the first representations.

The aim of the author in this instance is truly commendable for the morality it inculcates, and the lesson it teaches the financiers of the present age, who grasp at money obtained by any means.

LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixles, Sprites and Elves who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms, and forment them with their mischlevous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest; but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of night they resume their immobility.
